About the Museum Education Roundtable

A nationally recognized organization, the Museum Education Roundtable fosters professionalism among museum educators by encouraging leadership, scholarship and research in museum-based learning.

The Museum Education Roundtable promotes an active exchange of ideas through its programs and publications.

The Journal of Museum Education

MER publishes the Journal of Museum Education, the only journal printed in the United States that is devoted to the theory and practice of museum education.

Written by museum and education professionals, JME articles explore innovations in the field of museum education, teaching strategies for use in museums and other informal learning environments, visitor research, and evaluation.

Programs

MER hosts an annual program each year in Washington DC and a member's reception at the AAM annual conference. In addition, MER partners with regional groups to present programs that offer networking opportunities and discussions around issues of the JME.

5 Reasons to Join MER

News and Resources

Gain insight into the museum education field on the MER website.

The Journal of Museum Education

Members receive 3 issues per year of the JME, the premier publication reporting on theory, training, and practice in the museum education field.

In Person Networking

Members attend a special reception at the AAM annual meeting, programs in the Washington DC area, and learn about meetings in their area.

Online Networking

Find like minded colleagues through our international network of museum educators on the social networking sites LinkedIn and Facebook.

Serving on National Committees

Lend your expertise to MER working committees and task forces that shape national programs, workshops and the JME.

Join Us

We welcome active, engaged museum educators to join MER, serve on MER committees, and join us at regional and national conferences.
